About the Candidate

Self Description: As a medical student, I study during the week and look forward to weekends when I catch up with friends over coffee, visit local arts and cultural events, explore new restaurants, and spend time with my family. I am a lifelong learner- whether I'm immersed in different cultures through travel or reading an article on current events from home, I believe there is a lot to learn from life. As a future physician, I value community service and advocate for health literacy and human rights. I hope to meet someone who shares these values and with whom I can have meaningful conversations and make memories.

Interests: Travelling, Reading, Community Work

Spouse Preference: I am looking for someone who is interested in getting to know me but also shares what they are passionate about. I value honesty and communication and believe that the foundation of any relationship is mutual trust and respect. Tolerance of others is very important to me and I am looking for someone who enjoys learning about other cultures and is open to new experiences. While I am career driven and would prefer my partner to be as well, I also cherish time spent together.

Parent's views on my marriage: My parents are supportive of my decisions.
